

Ageing Without Children

“It’s a constant battle to get any help for my mum even though she’s in her 80’s and has dementia!! I feel like I am always having to shout really loudly to get anywhere. I wonder, who will be shouting for me? or will I be the old lady dying alone in a hospital bed because no one cares?”

By 2030, 2 million people over 65 will have no children but what does this mean for organisations working with older people?

This half day workshop will help you and your team

- Understand the extent and nature of the issues facing people ageing without children
- Discuss the reasons, assumptions and myths about why people arrive at later life without children
- Consider what services your organisation has for people ageing without children and what new solutions could be developed
- Think about ways your organisation and services can be more Ageing without Children friendly.

The workshop last approximately 3 hours and is led by Kirsty Woodard founder of Ageing Without Children.
