

creative intergenerational co-design workshop

2hr creative co-design model making & sketching workshop aimed at developing discussions and ideas surrounding multigenerational communities & age friendly environments.

“Social Connections” is a 15 week creative design project undertaken by 3rd year Interior Architecture & Design students at Heriot-Watt University investigating hypothetical design solutions for a mixed use residential scheme utilising the old Shrubhill Tramworks site, Leith. Students have prepared models of the existing building and are seeking volunteers to attend a participatory co-design workshop. This is an inclusive people centred workshop aiming to investigate purposeful environments for all. Particularly those supporting meaningful social interaction.

This is intended to be a socially innovative project which will engage with the local community of Leith, and wider specialists with an interest in age friendly neighbourhoods, ageing well, intergenerational projects, Leith and creative design methods. We actively encourage volunteers from diverse backgrounds & age groups to participate in this workshop. No previous experience of model making or sketching is required, this will be supported through our experienced student's & lecturers.

Date: 05.02.2018 Time: 10:00am-12:00pm Venue: “Out of the Blue Drill Hall”
Location: 36 Dalmeny St, Leith, Edinburgh, EH6 8RG

This project is also the focus of a research study investigating multigenerational communities. data will be collected at this event. More details are available from the event organiser,
Alison Hamilton-Pryde a.hamilton@hw.ac.uk

To reserve a ticket at this workshop please visit eventbrite
<https://www.eventbrite.com/e/social-connections-creative-intergenerational-design-workshop-tickets-42091372428?aff=affiliate1> or contact a.hamilton@hw.ac.uk

