Intergenerational workplaces

GWT invited a variety of private sector businesses to a workshop, the aim being to discuss issues relating to intergenerational practice in the workplace. In essence this means issues which arise as a result of not only having an ageing workforce, but particularly the resulting increased gap between the oldest and youngest employees. We hope to address not only the difficulties, but also the potential benefits and opportunities that might arise in an intergenerational workplace.

The session is being followed up another workshop involving GWT members at the national conference. Findings will then be collated and a plan to help resolve the issues possibly by offering an inquiry of the organisation to identify gaps and challenges and/or provide training to help organisations benefit from their intergenerational workforce.

Why?

The youngest & oldest sections of our society are facing the greatest housing challenges today. Young people are struggling to afford a place of their own and homelessness is set to increase with the removal of automatic Governmental housing support for 18-21-year olds. Conversely we have an increasingly older population with limited housing options for whom loneliness and isolation are real problems. Intergenerational living (old & young living side by side) provides a real solution to the issues faced by both groups.

Aim

The concept of intergenerational housing is not well known in the UK and no purpose-built projects exist. A scheme called Homeshare exists in the south of England, but this is limited to an elder person offering accommodation to a younger person at a reduced rate in exchange for some support. Emma aims to show that developing planned co-housing with shared facilities can invoke a sense of community where older people can benefit from reduced levels of loneliness and isolation & increased levels of civic participation, while younger generations can also benefit in similar ways & through the provision of affordable housing. Emma would like to change attitudes and values and contribute to the debate about the type of housing we should be planning and building.

Edinburgh Development Group (EDG) has funding to run a homeshare scheme in Edinburgh, initially it was for people with disabilities however they have found this extremely difficult and hope to make their first match with an older person before the Easter holidays.

EDG Homeshare are still looking for people who want to live with an adult with disabilities or an older person in exchange for free accommodation. The student will provide 10 hours of support a week which can include assistance with shopping, cooking and companionship. If you are interested, you can contact the Homeshare team on 0131 476 0522. <http://www.edg-sco.org/>

Ideas for Intergenerational Work

Inspiring Purpose: Between the Generations enables young people to explore the history and events of the First World War, as well as the character strengths and values required to get through this tough time, through discussions and working together with a partner from a different generation. This project creates a bond and relationship 'between the generations' and brings everyone together. The programme is ideal for young people under the age of 16 but must be completed with a partner from an older generation.

Digital Age project – Linking Generations Northern Ireland

THE BIG LUNCH, the UK's annual get together for neighbours and communities, will take place this year on Sunday 3rd June. Created and coordinated by the Eden Project Communities team, THE BIG LUNCH is a fantastic way to get people together for the first (but not the last!) time, to have fun, and plan future activities together. Big Lunches can lead to all kinds of interesting and exciting projects which transform communities for the better – and they are an important step in tackling the social isolation and loneliness which is so widespread in our neighbourhoods today.

They are also a wonderful way to bring different generations together and create lasting relationships between people of different ages in our communities. This year in Scotland, we really want to focus on this intergenerational aspect of THE BIG LUNCH by asking organisations such as yours to encourage the people you work with to plan and run one together – across the generations. So whether it's a school inviting older members of the community to prepare a lunch with them in the school, or a care home hosting a lunch with young people on board to co-organise it – or any other combination and setting which enables different generations to plan and enjoy a BIG LUNCH together – this is a really great opportunity to celebrate the diversity and common ground which is the foundation of intergenerational work. And it doesn't HAVE to be the 3rd of June if a Sunday is tricky – any time at the beginning of June will make it a BIG LUNCH and you can be part of this country-wide event.

As a first step, please either get in touch with Sandra Brown (sandrabrown@edenproject.com or 07703189049) OR register for an information pack here. No obligations come with this registration – just ideas! Then, spread the word, plan your BIG LUNCH and once you've held it, send us feedback and photos and we'll tell your story!

Sharing and networking –

- David Fyfe, Head Teacher, Campbeltown Grammar School couldn't attend the meeting however is very interested in meeting with GWT at some point in the future to discuss possible projects involving Campbeltown Grammar School.
- Beairteas - Feisgoil initiative to strengthen the Gaelic skills of young people
Beairteas is an intergenerational programme to match community based fluent Gaelic speakers with schools and community groups. Their richness of language, specialist knowledge of Gaelic culture and many other subjects about which they could speak in Gaelic, would provide a valuable resource for pupils, complementing the sterling work being done by teachers in Gaelic education. The Curriculum for Excellence encourages work and engagement with people in communities and Beairteas aims to offer opportunities for children to communicate in Gaelic with people other than their teachers. Engaging with Gaelic speakers who have specialist knowledge of the work they do or have done as well as any interesting pastimes in which they may have been involved in. This will strengthen the language skills of the young people giving them a breadth of vocabulary they may not pick up through their daily schoolwork. If you want to get involved you can email beairteas@feisean.org
- Care homes hoping to connect with Dunoon High School
- Lochgilphead Armed Forces Day on Thursday 26th July will have an intergenerational theme (Raymond, Youth Development)
- Befriending service covers the whole of Argyll and Bute and is keen to develop more intergenerational work, possibly using the Character Scotland activity
- Anne Horn gave apologies for not being able to join the GWT Coordinators Day in Glasgow on 26th September. If anyone in the membership would like to attend in place of Anne representing the Argyll & Bute network, please get in touch with Alison@generationsworkingtogether.org

Action: Alison would like help in circulating details of the network meetings especially to schools, care homes/sheltered housing, older people's groups and nurseries.

Next meeting: This will be confirmed once Josh Brown commences his new post as GWT's West of Scotland Network Development Officer. It is however proposed that the next meeting will be held in Campbeltown around September/October time.
