Mohammed
Youth Worker
South Wales

Mohammed is employed as a youth worker by his local authority in South Wales, based in the Community Development Team. Some of the community groups he works with are regularly affected by vandalism and break-ins to their community centre. In a previous job, Mohammed had great success developing an intergenerational mentoring project between young people looking for work and retired older adults, with the older participants supporting young people with CV-writing and mock interviews.

He is keen to know if any intergenerational work has occurred in the field of community development, particularly in community-based restorative practice, but doesn't know where to find this information.

Isabel
Pre-school (Nursery, Kindergarten) Teacher
Rwanda

Isabel is 36 and currently lives in Rwanda where she is working for a children's NGO (non-governmental organisation/charity). She is a pre-school (nursery, kindergarten) teacher specialising in alternative methodologies. Her final degree project was on intergenerational education in a pre-school setting for children up to 6 years of age. She is interested in intergenerational education and international cooperation with developing nations.

She recently completed Generations Working Together's online International Certificate in Intergenerational Practice (ICIP). She wanted help in identifying another project focused on intergenerational education and GWT was able to assist, giving her information and direction.

Isabel is an international member and, as a professional working for an NGO in the Global South, her membership fee was waived.
